Empathy Map 2

My dream house would almost certainly include a gigantic fridge that would hold all the food I need for the next month — that way I wouldn't even need to go outside. I'd also set up a cinema in my house, fully equipped with massage chairs, and, of course, a popcorn machine! It would be great to have some nature around me too, so I'd also like to have a garden filled with exotic flowers that would spread their scents all around the house.

My ideal house would be located in a small neighbourhood near a serene lake. It would be a cottage with a balcony that looks out on the river. I would spend my days sitting on the balcony and reading my favourite books. Also, there would be a large workroom on the top floor where I could work or browse the web on my computer. Generally, I would be satisfied with my house as long as it is clutter-free and tidy. I just need a place where I can truly relax my stressed mind.

- A home near your friends and loved ones
- A home in your preferred school district
- A community that reflects your personal values

Dream house, we all have a mental list of what our's would have if and when we build one. I recently polled my Instagram audience to see what their dream house must haves were. From their suggestions, I compiled the ultimate must have list for your dream house! I hope this list gives you ideas and inspiration for your own dream house. Whether you are remodeling, in the building process or simply day dreaming, use this list to help you create the home of your dreams!

broke down the must haves into categories to help you navigate through the list more easily. Have fun designing your dream home! There was a time, not too long ago, when a million-dollar home was something of a rarity reserved for the wealthy. But then the pandemic swept in and messed with everything, including the housing market. Suddenly, basic builder-grade homes were listed for half-a-million dollars. No small price, especially for first-time homeowners

Affordability is the biggest story happening in the housing market right now," says Amanda Pendleton, home trends expert at Zillow, a leading real estate website. "Remote work has opened up more opportunities. Whether that is hybrid or fully remote work, people have more options today than they did prior to the pandemic."

Dream home is something extraordinary which no one would have ever thought of.

Something that is extremely amazing and complete depiction of our thoughts, with which we can actually relate our emotions and feelings. You must have a vision of a dream house that you have developed or want to build.21-Feb-2023

My dream house would be shaped like a sphere and made of glass, and there would be a platform where you can bungee jump off. I've never tried bungee jumping before but I think it would be exhilarating. It would also have a garden with all sorts of flowers growing. Lastly, I would like my home to have a grand piano because I love playing and listening to the piano in my free time.

My father in law and I did very nearly everything. The only contractor I hired was for the sheet rock (plaster board).

It turned out to be a very livable house. It would win no design awards but it worked out well for us.

If you are thinking about doing it-do it- If I can build a house anyone can.

Interest in hot spots like Phoenix, Arizona, and Raleigh, North Carolina, has been replaced with curiosity about smaller locales such as Syracuse, New York, and Peoria, Illinois. These often overlooked cities brim with one-of-a-kind historical homes thanks to their land banks, non-profit organizations that work with the city to rehabilitate properties and neighborhoods.

And remember, these 10 cities are places where a house tops out at $350,000. With a bit of digging you can find a Tudor-style home under $75,000 in Toledo, Ohio, or a Victorian row house in Wheeling, West Virginia, that clocks just under $100 grand.

Even if you're not into rolling up your sleeves
